

CIRTL Network

Center for the Integration of Research, Teaching, and Learning

Writing an Effective NSF Graduate Research Fellowship Program (GRFP) Proposal

By participating in this workshop series, prospective applicants for the GRFP will develop a competitive proposal for submission.

Overview

Through a combination of recorded events and a synchronous online panel discussion, this workshop series will provide graduate students as well as senior undergraduate students with information about the following:

- the NSF GRFP call for proposals;
- how to write a successful proposal to address both the intellectual merit and broader impact criteria;
- the experiences of successful applicants; and
- how successful applicants leveraged local and online CIRTL Network programming in their proposals.

Workshop Schedule

Part 1: Watch a video providing an overview of the GRFP.

Recorded from Louisiana State University (posted to the CIRTL Network website on Friday, September 7th).

Part 2: Participate in a synchronous online session, led by students who have received a GRFP award. Talk in smaller groups with award recipients in a discipline similar to your own.

This session will take place on Thursday, September 13th, 2018 at the following time:
3:30-5:30 pm ET / 2:30-4:30 pm CT / 1:30-3:30 pm MT / 12:30-2:30 pm PT

Part 3: Watch a second video about addressing the broader impact criterion in the proposal.

Recorded from University of Wisconsin-Madison (posted to the CIRTL Network website on Monday, Oct. 8th).

Register:

To register go to: <https://www.cirtl.net/events/536>

This CIRTL workshop is a collaboration among the University of Oklahoma (OU), the University of Wisconsin-Madison (UW-Madison), Indiana University - Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI), the University of Georgia (UGA), and Louisiana State University (LSU).

WISCONSIN
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

LSU
LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY

IUPUI
FULFILLING the PROMISE

UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

The University of Oklahoma®